

IOPC public interest disclosures 2022/23

The Independent Office for Police Conduct (IOPC) oversees the police complaints system in England and Wales. We investigate the most serious matters, including deaths following police contact, and set the standards by which the police should handle complaints. We use learning from our work to influence changes in policing.

By law we are required to publish information about qualifying disclosures. A qualifying disclosure describes a situation in which a police officer or staff member passes on information, which they believe is in the public interest, that another police officer or staff member is doing, or is likely to do, something wrong or criminal. You can read about more about qualifying disclosures here.

The required information for the financial year 2022/23 is set out below.

Item	Information for 2022/23
Number of qualifying disclosures	39
Number of qualifying disclosures where we took further action	39
Summary of action taken	For 27 disclosures, we asked for consent to forward the relevant information provided to the police forces. Twelve disclosures were passed to our Intelligence Unit. The unit assessed the information and liaised with other teams about whether any action should be taken. None of the disclosures resulted in us conducting an independent investigation.
Summary of the impact these disclosures had on our ability to perform our functions or meet our objectives	No impact

© IOPC 2023

OGL This is licensed under the Open Government Licence v3.0 except where otherwise stated.

This does not include material on this site as belonging to third parties. Authorisation to use such material must be obtained from the copyright holders concerned.